Golf Charity Eyes Award

Steve Stein
Contributing Writer

The Millman NRG Foundation — the initials are an acronym for No Restrictions Golf — is a finalist for a prestigious da Vinci Award. “We’re excited, honored and humbled by the recognition,” said Scott Millman of Farmington Hills, a master golf teaching professional who oversees the foundation. Established in 2001, the international da Vinci Awards program recognizes the most innovative developments and research in adaptive and assistive technologies.

This year’s Michigan awards banquet will be held Thursday, April 10, at the Ford Conference & Event Center in Dearborn.

The black-tie-optional event features an Academy Awards-style awards presentation with big-screen videos and glass trophies going to the winners.

Proceeds benefit the Michigan Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. More than 18,000 state residents live with MS.

The Millman Foundation is one of three nominees for a da Vinci Award in the Recreation/Leisure/Rehabilitation/Fitness category.

Thanks to the foundation, more than 300 veterans and others with disabilities from teens through senior citizens have participated in free golf clinics over the past three years.

The foundation has presented two major clinics each year and has been a part of many other events. It has worked with Friendship Circle and JARC.

Both foundation clinics last year were held at Whispering Willows Golf Course in Livonia.

Home medical equipment supplier Wright & Filippis of Rochester Hills is a foundation partner.

Millman, 43, said his wife, Teresa Millman, has been an invaluable help behind the scenes.

Golf instructor Forrest Geary has helped Scott Millman teach at the foundation clinics all three years. Scott Millman also thanked foundation board member Justin Comstock for his “tireless efforts.”

While the foundation is celebrating its da Vinci award nomination, it’s also mourning the loss of one of its board members.

Scott Millman said Zach Potter, a U.S. Army veteran who served two tours of duty in Iraq and suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder, provided great help to the foundation before his death Jan. 9 at age 32.

The dates for this year’s foundation clinics haven’t been set. Clinics are normally held in May and September.

In addition to his work with the foundation, Scott Millman is director of instruction at Play Golf 365 in West Bloomfield Township.

Masters-ful Raffle

Someone will win a 2015 Masters golf tournament experience at the 24th annual Hank Greenberg Memorial Golf Invitational.

The drawing for a raffle will take place after dinner Monday, June 9, at Franklin Hills Country Club. The winner does not need to be present.

Raffle tickets are $100. Proceeds will benefit the nonprofit Michigan Jewish Sports Foundation, which presents the invitational.

Two-hundred tickets are available, and they’ll be sold at the invitational if any are left.

The experience doesn’t include transportation, and the winner must be at least 21 years old.

Two tickets for Friday, Saturday or Sunday (April 10-12, 2015) are part of the package, which has a value of $5,000.

Also included are lodging for one night, entrance into the VIP lounge, valet parking, shuttle service, food, open bar, programs, mementos and a golf swing analysis.

Foundation Executive Director David Blatt said this is the third Masters experience raffle the organization has done. Two have been in connection with the Greenberg Invitational and one with the Michigan Sports Hall of Fame induction banquet.

“The first two raffles were very successful,” he said. “The winners loved the prize.”

To purchase a raffle ticket, contact Blatt at blatt@michiganjewishsports.org or (248) 592-9323.

If the winner isn’t at the invitational, he or she will be notified within seven days. □
